Special Commemorative Issue
Communications of the ACM, July 1972 in honor of ACM’s 25th Anniversary.

If you’re involved in any way with computers, you shouldn’t miss the July issue of Communications of the ACM. It’s our 25th Anniversary issue, full of in-depth articles on just about every aspect of the field from the toey of computing and computerware to applications, historical perspectives, and industry leader viewpoints.

It’s an issue with an especially attractive design and nearly three times our normal editorial content. Over 30 articles in all, each written by a respected authority.

“Evolution of Storage Structures” to Steve Kimbleton’s “Computer System Models in Performance Evaluation.”

You’ll want one copy for day-to-day use and a second as a commemorative keepsake.
Order as many copies as you want now, at the special price of $7.00 per copy!
