FEATURE ARTICLES

7 Interactive Graphics Devices
   Guest Editor Anthony P. Lucido

9 System Design Considerations for Graphics Input Devices
   Mark Ohlson
   A simple classification of graphics input requirements relates types of information to types of devices, giving the system designer a framework for overall design decisions.

20 Storage CRT Display Terminals: Evolution and Trends
   Richard B. Preiss
   Storage-tube display technology and costs will continue to attract new users and new applications, especially where very high information density is needed.

29 An Overview of Directed Beam Graphics Display Hardware
   Anthony P. Lucido
   Directed beam CRT display devices have been available for some time now—long enough that we can discuss some organizations for practical graphics systems derived from the basic directed beam display design.

38 A Brief, Personal History of Computer Graphics
   Carl Machover
   Has computer graphics come of age? Yes—several times, with more companies, better technology, and lower costs each time.

48 The Neuroscience Display Processor
   Joseph J. Capowski
   After five years of experience meeting neuroscientists' display requirements, a university computer center constructed a low-cost, special-purpose, highly successful graphics processor.

SPECIAL FEATURES

60 COMPCON Fall 78 Wrap-Up
   Ware Myers and John Luke

72 Open Channel—Software Quality Technology: (Sad) Status Of; (Unapproached) Limits To; (Manifold) Alternatives To
   Paul B. Moranda

DEPARTMENTS

4 Special Message
5 Letters to the Editor
80 New Products
84 New Literature
86 IC Announcements
87 Microsystems

88 New Applications
89 Repository
91 Classified Ads
94 Update: AFIPS Washington Report
100 Call for Papers
101 Calendar

102 Book Reviews: 8080A/8085 Assembly Language Programming; Microcomputer-Based Design
104 Advertisers/Product Index
107 The Bookshelf: COMPSAC 78 Publications

Reader Service Cards and Order Forms, pp. 105-106