The ongoing growth in mobile data traffic has sparked the interest of several stakeholders, including users, application developers, network operators, content providers, businesses, and regulatory authorities, leading to challenges in delivering a high-performance mobile Internet. This issue highlights three of these challenges: crowd-sourced measurements, mobility for video traffic, and personalization on the mobile device.

HIGH-PERFORMANCE MOBILE INTERNET

8 Guest Editors’ Introduction
Anirban Mahanti and Subhabrata Sen

12 Characterizing Traffic Performance in Cellular Networks
F. Javier Rivas Tocado, Almudena Diaz Zayas, and Pedro Merino Gómez

20 Mobile Data Offloading: A Host-Based Distributed Mobility Management Approach

30 EPE: An Embedded Personalization Engine for Mobile Users
JongWoo Ha, Jung-Hyun Lee, and SangKeun Lee

FEATURES

Internet Security

40 Certification Authorities Under Attack: A Plea for Certificate Legitimation
Rolf Oppliger

Web Semantics

48 Leveraging Semantic Similarity for Folksonomy-Based Recommendation
Daniela Godoy, Gustavo Rodriguez, and Franco Scavuzzo

Platform as a Service

56 PaaS Characteristics for Productive Software Development: An Evaluation Framework
Oliver Gass, Hendrik Meth, and Alexander Maedche

For more information on these or any other computing topics, please visit the IEEE Computer Society Digital Library at www.computer.org/publications/dlib.