Large public or semi-public institutions are often the last adopters of new technology innovations. However, they are often the institutions that can benefit most from the new technologies. This track will examine the operational and strategic opportunities that can be enjoyed by these sectors that are typically characterized as less technologically savvy.